

History and stories of the island

A site occupied since prehistoric times

The occupation of the site dates from 100 000 years before Christ. Three important periods can be noticed :

- Neanderthal (100 000 years BC) left relics and traces of his passage to Tatihou.
- Bronze age (1800 to 1000 years BC) : some land allotments and traces of agricultural buildings were found.
- In the IXth century, the Vikings settling on the coasts of Normandy, named the island « Tatihou » (« hou » = land surrounded by water and « tat » = Scandinavian proper name).

The Battle of la Hougue

The battle of Barfleur-La Hougue took place from May 30th to June 2nd, 1692.

In 1692, the island only had a few redoubts protected by earth walls that were built following an inspection of Vauban in 1688.

The battle of Barfleur-La Hougue confront the France and an Anglo-Dutch coalition. At the end of the battle, eleven French vessels commanded by Admiral Tourville were beached and burned between Tatihou and the pointe of La Hougue.

As early as 1694, in order to defend the Bay against new attacks, Tatihou and la Hougue towers were built by Benjamin de Combes, a Vauban engineer. Since 2008, they are listed World Heritage of the UNESCO. Vauban notes in 1699 that the « La Hougue harbour is the best in France ».

The fortifications went on until the XXth century with the construction of a fort and sizeable powder magazines then elements of the Atlantic Wall.

Lazaret, scientific laboratory and more recently, center for children

In order to avoid spreading the plague of Marseille in 1720, the King decided to create a lazaret on Tatihou. During « quarantines », goods and crews received fumigations with heaths, juniper berries, and old leather, etc. This medical unit functioned until the 1860's.

In 1887, the Museum of natural history based in Paris occupied the buildings of the lazaret. Researchers set up a marine laboratory with a sea water tower to study seaweed, plankton and experiment turbot farming.

In 1922, this laboratory moved to Saint-Servan then to Dinard. In 1926, children became the occupants of the island. This outdoor school of health education stayed on the island until the war.

In 1948, the educationalist Camille Belliard, settled on the island and catered to young people in difficulty. These teenagers were in judicial or family placement and benefited from the vocational building industry training until 1984.

Heritage, protection and development

During several years, this island was deserted until its assignment to the « Conservatoire de l'espace littoral », a public corporation charged with protecting the natural coasts of France.

In 1990 a management agreement entrusts the County Council of La Manche for development, management and cultural activities of the island.

On June 5th 1992, on the occasion of the tercentenary of the Battle of La Hougue, Tatihou island and its maritime museum opened to the public.

Tatihou Island

Saint-Vaast-la-Hougue - Manche

Welcome to Tatihou

Please follow the instructions given to you by the ticket office as to where and when to board and the exact time, depending on the tide, to go to the appropriate boarding area to await the boat.

Crossing on the Tatihou III boat

Boarding at Green Light Pier « Jetée feu vert » : sailing to the island !

The boat « Tatihou III » is unique. This boat was inspired by shell industry barges of the Cancale bay. This amphibious boat operates by hydraulic propulsion which moves propellers and wheels. Therefore, the boat is equipped with a steering wheel for driving and boating. The boat sails over the oyster beds and close to the site of the shipwrecks of the Battle of La Hougue . On the horizon, towards the south, you can see the fortified St-Marcouf islands

Boarding on the beach at « la Cale » : driving to the island !

The « Tatihou III » crosses the Rhun, which is covered with every tide . This area is used by oyster-farmers, who have oyster beds set up on 250 hectares in the shallow tidal areas, « l'estran ». Saint-Vaast is the oldest oyster basin of La Manche. This oyster is characterized by its hazelnut taste linked to the quality of the water and to the oyster-farming techniques using tables and pouches. The yearly production is about 6500 tons.
